
Preaching and Preachers by D. Martyn Lloyd-Jones is another all-time classic in the preaching world. This book was originally a series of lectures given by Dr. Lloyd-Jones at Westminster Theological Seminary in 1972. In it he sought to provide a vision for preaching that would encourage and equip a generation of preachers. The 40th anniversary edition also includes essays from Tim Keller, John Piper, Mark Dever, Kevin DeYoung, and more. In my journey to grow as a preacher of God’s Word I have spent time in many books on the subject and I have to say, Preaching & Preachers has proved to be Preaching for Preachers is a great book, and though you may even disagree with Lloyd-Jones at various parts, the internal dialogue with him will no doubt prove fruitful. I will close this review with this quote: “I can forgive a man for a bad sermon, I can forgive the preacher almost anything if he gives me a sense of God, if he gives me a sense that, though he is inadequate in himself, he is handling something which is very great and very glorious, if he gives me some dim glimpse of the majesty and the glory of God.” This book is a reflection on the task and art of preaching from one of the best preachers of the 20th century. Even as only an occasional preacher I found the advice to be very beneficial. Lloyd-Jones does speak from a Calvinist perspective, so if you’re not a Preaching and Preachers book.
